C. : National Science Foundation, 2006 OCLC Number: (OCoLC)70835031 Subject: Engineering -- Computer simulation. Excerpt: . . . Simulation refers to the application of computational models to the study and prediction of physical events or the behavior of engineered systems. The development of computer simulation has drawn from a deep pool of scientific, mathematical, computational, and engineering knowledge and methodologies. With the depth of its intellectual development and its wide range of applications, computer simulation has emerged as a powerful tool, one that promises to revolutionize the way engineering and science are conducted in the twenty-first century. Computer simulation represents an extension of theoretical science in that it is based on mathematical models. Such models attempt to characterize the physical predictions or consequences of scientific theories. Simulation can be much more, however. For example, it can be used to explore new theories and to design new experiments to test these theories. Simulation also provides a powerful alternative to the techniques of experimental science and observation when phenomena are not observable or when measurements are impractical or too expensive. Simulation-Based Engineering Science (...)
